Overview

Does ASEAN need energy storage?

The ASEAN bloc has set the targets of 23% renewable energy in its Total Primary Energy Supply (TPES) and 35% renewable energy in ASEAN installed power capacity by 2025. This means that energy storage is required. Additionally, without BESS acceptance on a larger level, the needed funds won't materialise, and fewer BESS will be built.

Are lithium-ion batteries suitable for the ASEAN region?

Lithium-Ion (Li-ion) batteries, with their high energy density and efficiency, remain dominant but pose thermal management and safety issues in hot climates. Iron-based batteries offer enhanced thermal stability and safety, making them suitable for the ASEAN region despite their lower energy density and commercial immaturity.

Are iron based batteries a good choice for the ASEAN region?

Iron-based batteries offer enhanced thermal stability and safety, making them suitable for the ASEAN region despite their lower energy density and commercial immaturity. Zinc-based batteries, being cost-effective and environmentally friendly, are well-suited for hot climates, though they still face challenges with energy density and cycle life.

Does Singapore have a battery energy storage system?

Of the 11 ASEAN members, Singapore is taking the lead in the battery energy storage systems (BESS) space. Earlier this year, the city-state launched the region's largest battery energy storage system (BESS).

How can a battery chemistry improve Bess performance in Southeast Asia?

These innovations are pivotal for enabling behind-the-meter solutions in ASEAN, supporting a transition towards more sustainable and resilient energy systems. As technological advancements continue, a diversified approach using multiple battery chemistries will optimise BESS performance in Southeast Asia.

Why do ASEAN countries need long-term energy plans?

Long-term energy plans provide strategic direction for integrating renewable energy and storage solutions. By fostering a supportive policy and regulatory environment, ASEAN countries can significantly enhance BESS adoption, ultimately improving energy security, grid stability, and renewable integration across the region.
