Overview

What is a Li-ion battery second protection IC?

A Li-ion battery second protection IC has a overcharge detection function and can add sufficient redundancy and double protection to a normal battery protection circuit. Our second protection ICs adopt a kind of fuse device called SC protector.

What is a battery protection circuit?

Battery protection circuits are crucial components that safeguard lithium-ion batteries from potential hazards like overcharging, over-discharging, and short circuits. These circuits monitor the voltage and temperature of the battery, ensuring that it operates within safe limits.

What is ablic battery protection IC?

ABLIC's battery protection ICs for multi-cell pack: Our vast product lineup provides strong support for developing safety-critical battery packs with secondary protection and other features to suit customer needs such as smaller, lighter, and thinner applications and the cascade connection of a large number of battery cells in series.

What is a battery protection IC?

1. ABLIC's Battery Protection ICs Battery protection ICs protect batteries from hazards such as overcharging, overdischarging and overcurrent. ABLIC has been developing and producing battery protection ICs since 1993, and has a track record of approximately 30 years in the industry.

Are lithium-ion batteries with SCPs still used?

The lithium-ion batteries with SCPs were quickly adopted by many computer manufacturers. Today, Dexerials' SCPs are still used as fuses in the secondary protection circuits of many products, including laptops. As the lithium-ion battery market expanded, so did the demand for SCPs.

What is a lithium-ion battery protection circuit?

A Lithium-ion battery protection circuit is specifically designed to protect lithium-ion cells. It typically includes a combination of electronic components such as transistors, diodes, and resistors that work together to control the current flow.
