What is a battery storage system?

A battery storage system is primarily used to balance out the power supply from renewable energies. Renewable energies such as solar, wind and hydropower are dependent on the time of day and the weather. The battery storage system is fed with surplus electricity and stores the energy on demand.

Is battery energy storage the future of energy storage?

The International Energy Agency (IEA) projects a sixfold increase in global storage capacity by 2030 1, with commercial and industrial systems alone expected to surge nearly tenfold to 560 GWh – underscoring the critical role of battery energy storage in enabling cleaner, more resilient power systems 2.

How does a battery storage system work?

The battery storage system is fed with surplus electricity and stores the energy on demand. This means that the technology center does not need emergency power generators that run on fossil fuels. In addition, power fluctuations can be balanced out and risks such as a blackout can be minimized.

Why is Laufenburg a good location for a battery storage facility?

Laufenburg is the heart of and the oldest node in the European electricity grid. The location is unique with The electricity site enables a direct connection of the battery storage facility without detours and power losses and is therefore ideally suited as a location for the storage facility.
